Lauren, Kevin and their young son, Ian, rent a two bedroom apartment in southern Ulster County. Kevin was recently laid off from his job, and the family became dependent on Lauren's job as an office manager at a local small business. Before Kevin was laid off, they were just making ends meet, earning about $15/hour. But with only one paycheck, things had started to snowball. It was December, so they needed the electricity to heat their home, and having food in the house was essential, especially with a little one to tend to. So they got behind on their rent and were served with an eviction notice.

“Never in a million years did I think we would be in this position,” Lauren remarked. “My husband and I work very hard to take care of our family and here we were, on the verge of becoming homeless. A friend of mine at work told me she had heard that the United Way might be able to help, so I gave them a call. Thankfully they were able to pay the back rent we owed, and direct Kevin to a local program that helps people find jobs. Kevin is working again (and actually making a little bit more money!), so hopefully we won't find ourselves in that position again. But if it wasn't for United Way, I really don't know where we'd be.”
